the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are under 15 years of age is expected to increase from 1.1 billion to 1.5 billion (United Nations 1994).

There are a number of reasons why the number of children in the world is increasing:

- (1) The number of children who are born is increasing.
- (2) The number of children who are dying is decreasing.
- (3) The number of children who are being adopted is increasing.

The first two reasons are the most important. The number of children who are born is increasing because:

- (1) The number of children who are being born to women who are younger than 20 years of age is increasing.
- (2) The number of children who are being born to women who are older than 35 years of age is increasing.

The number of children who are dying is decreasing because:

- (1) The number of children who are dying from infectious diseases is decreasing.
- (2) The number of children who are dying from malnutrition is decreasing.
- (3) The number of children who are dying from violence is decreasing.

The number of children who are being adopted is increasing because:

- (1) The number of children who are being adopted from other countries is increasing.
- (2) The number of children who are being adopted from their biological parents is increasing.

The number of children who are being adopted from other countries is increasing because:

- (1) The number of children who are being adopted from other countries is increasing.
- (2) The number of children who are being adopted from other countries is increasing.

The number of children who are being adopted from their biological parents is increasing because:

- (1) The number of children who are being adopted from their biological parents is increasing.
- (2) The number of children who are being adopted from their biological parents is increasing.
